Take care during unusually hot weather - By Herefordshire Council

Herefordshire has experienced heatwave conditions over the past few weeks, according to the Met Office.

High temperatures on two consecutive days can have significant effects on health.

The Met Office's top advice for being sun safe:

- Keep out of the sun between 11am to 3pm
- If you have to go out in the heat, walk in the shade, apply sunscreen and wear a hat and light scarf
- Avoid extreme physical effort
- Wear light, loose-fitting cotton clothes
- Cool yourself down
- Have plenty of cold drinks, and avoid excess alcohol, caffeine and hot drinks
- Eat cold foods, particularly salads and fruit with a high-water content
- Take a cool shower, bath or body wash
- Sprinkle water over the skin or clothing, or keep a damp cloth on the back of your neck

See you in October — deadline September 21st.

Remember, it can get uncomfortably hot indoors, too.

Try to keep your bedroom and living space cool by closing the curtains on windows that face the sun and opening your windows at cooler times of the day and overnight when you can. Turn off non-essential lights and electrical items as these generate heat.

Look after vulnerable people when it's hot

While many people enjoy hot weather, high temperatures can be dangerous, especially for vulnerable people, older people, young children and those with serious illnesses.

Everyone can enjoy the sun safely by keeping out of the heat at the hottest time of the day, avoiding sunburn and staying hydrated with plenty of cool drinks.

Older people and those with long-term illnesses are particularly vulnerable to the effects of very hot weather. Therefore, it's important to look out for them and keep indoor areas as cool as possible.

Matt Pearce, Herefordshire Council's director of public health, says:

“Whilst it's great to have some nice weather, it's important that we take the necessary precautions to enjoy it safely and look out for those in the community who are at risk from the effects of heat.”

Become a Health Checker for Speak Easy Now

My name is Becky I had a very exciting opportunity to become a Health Checker for Speak Easy Now. Speak Easy Now is a Self Advocacy group for people with learning disabilities to get things done.

My role as a Health checker is to help people with a learning disability to have a voice and to be heard with what they need with all aspects of health such as understanding your annual health checks and going to the dentist. Worcestershire have a group but we are trying to set up a group in Herefordshire.

I contributed to making the Healthy Bowel Event happen which is about how to keep your bowels healthy like exercising and having a good diet.

This Friday the 8th of July I took part in a Healthy Bowel Event in Worcester.

I am working with Inclusion North to produce a short film about the Mental Capacity Act.

We are also hoping to work with the learning disability partnership board in Herefordshire. We are going to a meeting at the end of the month with the learning disability partnership board in Herefordshire.

If you would like to get involved Please come and join us as the most important thing to everyone is our health. For this to go ahead we need you to join in. we have fun we meet up once a month. You get to work with health care professionals but most importantly we have a voice.

Noda Conference - By Tracy Roberts

I was invited to go to this year's West Midlands Noda conference. I went with Louise Hickey, Louisa Tobin and Mandy Naylor who are from Hereford Amateur Pantomime Society which I belong to.

The conference was at Norbury theatre and cinema in Droitwich where they held three different workshops which were stage makeup, page to stage and a workshop on wigs. Also, they had their AGM.

In the afternoon we had a special awards ceremony where our pantomime society collected a special award for their production of Aladdin. Me and Louisa went to collect the award.

I really enjoyed my first Noda conference, and it was nice to see some summer school friends as well.

My spookie story - By Peter Crum

In the dark house there was a big spider called Colin he said, "Stay away from the house it is scary".

"How do you know that then?"

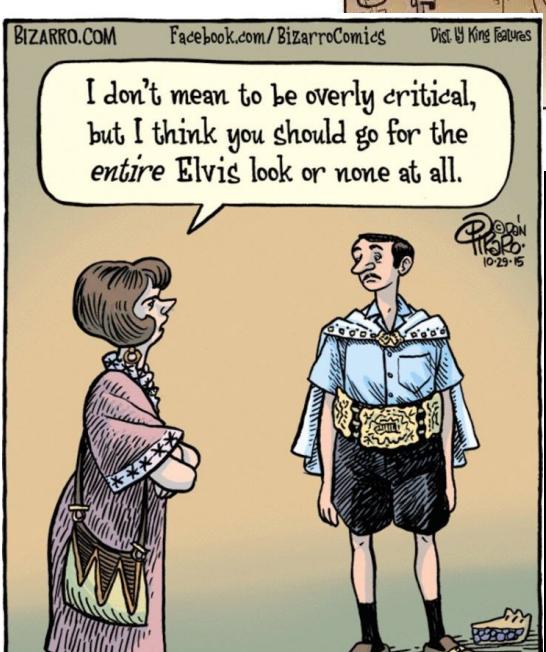

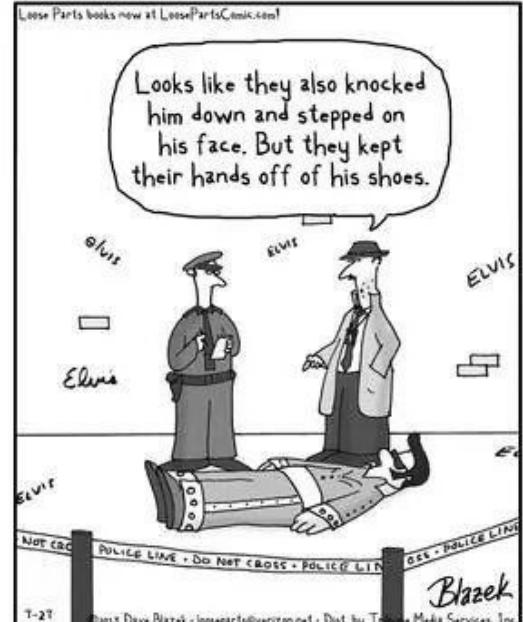

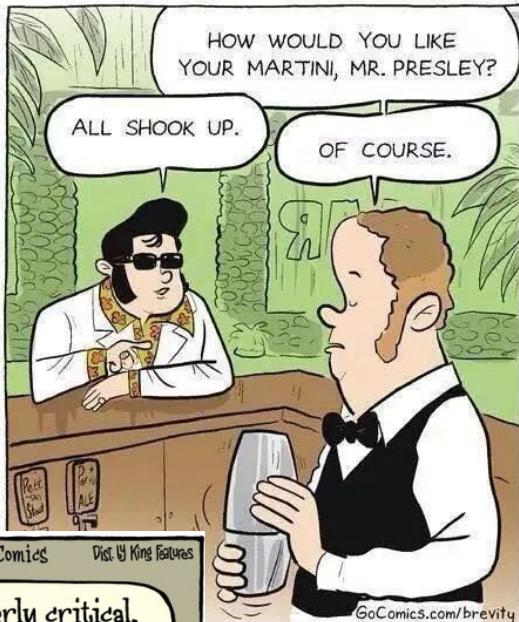

Colin the spider said, "Because I've seen it, a lot of things go on inside the house like a monster and a big zombie to eat you up!"

"My name is Peter, I don't want to go inside the house if it's got monsters and a big zombie. I'll be going back where I came from!"

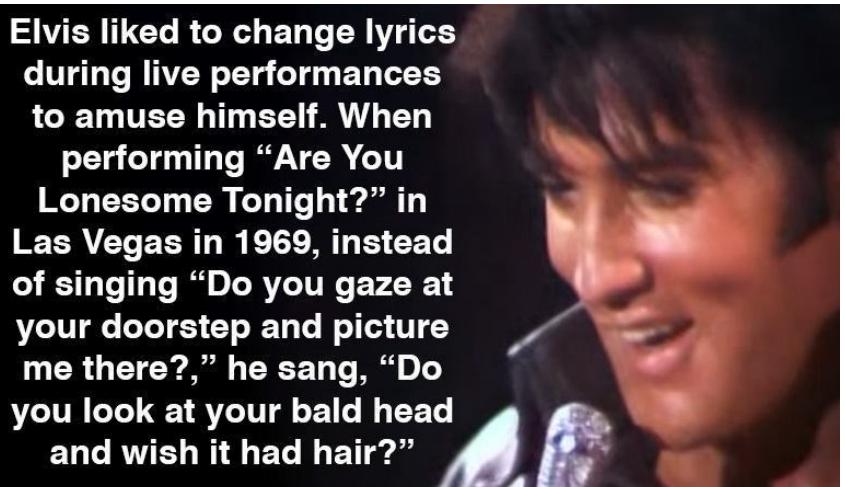

"Goodbye", said Peter and walked away.

Jokes

Elvis liked to change lyrics during live performances to amuse himself. When performing "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" in Las Vegas in 1969, instead of singing "Do you gaze at your doorstep and picture me there?", he sang, "Do you look at your bald head and wish it had hair?"

Different religions of the world — By Adrian Phipps

Buddhism

Buddhism is an Indian religion based on a series of original teachings attributed to Gautama Buddha. It originated in ancient India as a Sramana tradition sometime between the 6th and 4th centuries BCE (before common era), spreading through much of Asia. It is the world's fourth largest religion with over 520 million followers.

Hinduism

Hinduism is an Indian religion, or way of life, and is also the world's third largest religion, with over 12 billion followers, or 15-16% of the global population, known as Hindus.

Hinduism is a diverse system of thought marked by a range of philosophies and shared concepts, rituals, cosmological systems (to do with the stars), pilgrimage sites, and shared written sources that discuss theology, metaphysics (thoughts on the meaning of things like 'being' or 'time'), mythology (traditional stories) among other things. Important themes in Hindu beliefs include the four Purusarthas, the proper goals or aims of human life; namely dharma (truth), artha (prosperity/work) Karma (action, intent and consequences) and samsara (cycle of death and rebirth).

Sikhism

Sikhism is an Indian religion, founded in the 15th century CE. Sikhism developed from the spiritual teachings of Guru Nanak (1469-1539), the faith's first guru, and the nine Sikh gurus who succeeded him.

The tenth guru, Gobind Singh (1666-1708), named the Sikh scripture "Guru Granth Sahib" as his successor, bringing to a close the line of human gurus and establishing the scripture as the 11th and last eternally living guru, a religious spiritual/life guide for Sikhs.

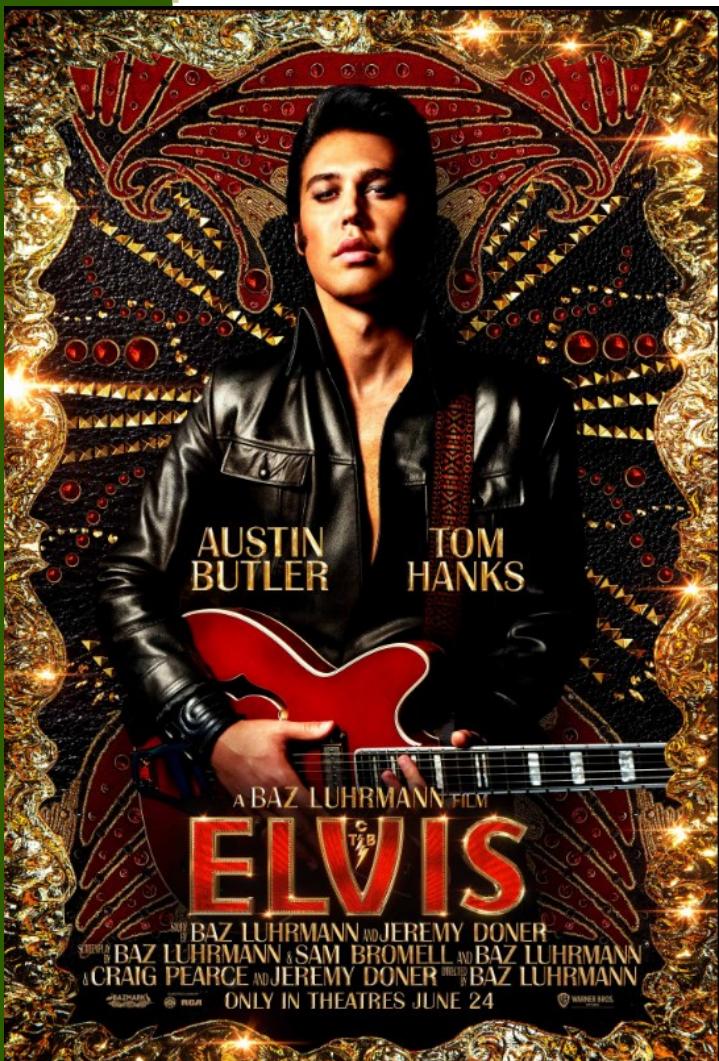

The religion developed and evolved in times of religious persecution, gaining converts from both Hinduism and Islam. Mughal rulers of India tortured and executed two of the Sikh gurus – Guru Arjan and Guru Tegh Bahadur – after they refused to convert to Islam.

Elvis film - By Tracy Roberts

In 1997, Elvis Presley's former manager, Colonel Tom Parker, is on his deathbed, obsessed with gambling, and looking back on how he first met the future King of Rock and Roll.

In the early days, Elvis had battled a poverty-ridden childhood with his parents Vernon and Gladys. He finds music to be a salvation, even though he is mocked by his peers because of his interest with the African American music of Memphis' Beale Street. Parker is a carnival publicity agent who fancies himself a modern-day PT Barnum, playing upon the innocent nature of his audience.

Although Parker is already managing country singer Hank Snow, as soon as he hears Presley on the radio, he seems to be impressed with what he hears and plans to become his manager. Parker eventually meets and persuades Elvis to let him take control of his career, which begins a dramatic climb.

However, not all the public is impressed with the young entertainer. Many parents fear that his music is corrupting their children, and racist politicians also attack him for his involvement with black musicians.

After a violent incident at a concert, Elvis finds himself facing a possible jail term.

However, it is implied that Parker persuades the government to draft Elvis into the US Army as a way of avoiding any further legal messes.

During his time in the service, Elvis discovers that his mother has died of alcoholism.

Elvis film continued from page 14.

While stationed in Germany, Elvis meets Priscilla Beaulieu and, on his discharge, he resumes his career-making concert tours and films while Parker's control of his life becomes even stronger.

As the Sixties pass him by, Elvis is heartbroken by the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr and Robert Kennedy, wishing to become more politically outspoken in his music while Parker merely wants him to sing playful tunes that will be best sellers. Motivated further by President Lyndon Johnson's speech regarding recent turmoil in America, Elvis gets in the mood to record something different.

A breaking point between Elvis and Parker occurs when Elvis makes a live television recording of various progressive and political songs for what was originally supposed to be a traditional Christmas showtune broadcast, infuriating all of the network sponsors.

After Parker refuses his request for a world tour and locks him into a long contract to entertain at a Las Vegas hotel, Elvis discovers that Parker had denied his world tour due to him being an illegal Dutch immigrant with no passport. He attempts to fire Parker, only to be sued by him for a huge amount that would leave Elvis broke and destitute. A heated argument ensues, while afterwards Elvis has to admit that he has no choice but to maintain his management from Parker, although they grow apart and rarely see each other.

As Elvis's life begins to spiral downward, a frustrated and despondent Priscilla takes their daughter Lisa Marie and leaves him over his prescription drug addiction, which grows even stronger after she is gone. This results in his death from a heart attack on August 16, 1977, at the age of 42.

Before his death, Elvis had also expressed to Priscilla that no one will remember him after he is gone. At one of Elvis's final shows, he is bloated and pale (while the media mocks his appearance), singing "Unchained Melody".

Parker dies old, impoverished and alone.

I thought the film was really good, I was impressed by the actor who played Elvis.
